Which of the following is the most similar to your current career story?

You are returning to the workforce after a long break and you are concerned about your career gap.

Your company is downsizing, and you are having difficulties putting together a resume.

You want to have better career prospects. You don't know what to do to get there.

You want to switch careers, but you are worried it would be a costly mistake.

You have been in the same company for 10 years, and you lack mentors or connections to grow your career.

A headhunter contacted you for a possible job opportunity at a big company. What's your reaction?

I'm unsure of what to do next.

I'm too scared to try something new.
What if it doesn't work out?

I'll pass. I'm tired of job-hunting, and I won't get it anyway.

I'll give it a shot, but I doubt my resume will stand out.

I'm not sure if I'll go for it.
What if it is not what I want?

You overheard rumours that your company is downsizing. What do you do?

I scroll through my contacts but couldn't find anyone who can link me up with a job.

Discuss with my colleagues since I'm unsure.

Check my email to see if there's any response to my (200 and counting) applications.

Unsure of what to do. At my age, it'd be difficult to find a new job.

Start to learn more about other potential industries I can go into. Maybe this is the right time.

You have a job-related nightmare. What does it look like?

Messing up the interview for my dream job.

Pulling my hair out at my desk because this is not what I signed up for.

Breaking down in tears every time I think of applying for jobs.

Tried to break the awkward silence with my potential hirer and I could only comment on his ugly tie.

I was asked to describe my strengths and I stood frozen.

What would you consider your biggest 'weakness' as a candidate?

I get nervous during interviews.

I'm unable to sell myself in an 'elevator' pitch.

I lack knowledge in the industry I'm applying for.

I don't know what my values and interests are.

I'm too burnt out by the job search process.
